XIV.—METEOROLOGICAL STATISTICS.

No. 37.—Notes on the Rainfall of Western Australia for January, February, and March, 1919.

January.—The only rain of importance recorded during January fell in the form of the usual summer thunderstorms in the Kimberley districts. Over the greater part of the East and North Kimberleys the totals were slightly below the average, but at Hall's Creek a small excess was shown. In the West Kimberley, less than half the normal fall was registered.

Occasionally some scattered thundershowers extended to the N.W. Divisions, and various portions of the interior of the State, but apart from one or two isolated stations in the Wheat Belt, the gaugings all showed deficiencies when compared with the normals. On the 17th some showers visited the W. and S.W. Coasts and agricultural country. In most cases they were very light, but between Fremantle and Busselton, and at a few inland stations, the average for the month was exceeded.

February.—Over the greater portion of the State the rainfall for February varied from nil to a few points, but in certain localities exceptions were met with. Most important of these was the Kimberley division, where the ordinary February rains were experienced, the totals ranging from an inch below normal at Fitzroy to 3·54 inches above at Derby and 10·43 inches above at Broome. In the N.W., where the earlier summer months were also very dry, rain was still wanting at the end of the month, Nullagine (0·43 inches above the average) being the only station to record a substantial fall.

Over subtropical areas most of the rain fell in the form of thunderstorms, which visited the Murchison, Coolgardie Goldfields, and a few isolated Eastern agricultural stations between the 9th and 14th. As a result excesses above normal were met with over a rather narrow belt of country extending from the Wongan-Mullewa Railway through the Central portion of the Coolgardie Goldfields, and thence to the S.E. corner of the State. To the Northward and Southward of this zone the falls were inconsiderable.

Another disturbance, associated with thunder, visited the S.W. quarter on the 24th. The gaugings, although mostly unimportant, were moderate in the Metropolitan Area, and resulted in excesses being recorded.

In the extreme South, between Denmark and Bremer Bay, the monthly averages were also surpassed, owing to Antarctic activity during the earlier half of the month.

March.—The only rainfall of importance during the month of March occurred at Wyndham in connection with a cyclonic storm which lasted from the 3rd to the 5th. The total registration for the three days was 17·58 inches—13·52 inches above the average for the month. All the other tropical stations showed deficiencies, and over the greater part of the North-West no rain fell at all. That district has, therefore, suffered an almost complete failure of the summer rains.

Heavy rains have at rare intervals visited the North-West during April and May, while fairly good falls of Winter type in June were not infrequent, and it is in this possibility that the best prospect of rain before next summer exists.

South of the Tropic nothing beyond an isolated thunderstorm or a few scattered coastal showers occurred until the closing days of the month, when a depression that brought small coastal showers was followed by an active high pressure system which, upon reaching the Bight, set up a cold, damp South-East draught. An extensive "anticyclonic rainfall" ensued, affecting the South Coolgardie Goldfield, and the agricultural districts as far North as the Dowerin-Merredin Railway. At about a dozen stations the gaugings were heavy enough to account for slight excesses above normal, but otherwise the only excess recorded was at Winning Pool, where a heavy thunderstorm occurred on the 9th.
